Jasmine Perez,

EWB and FWEA CFC teamed up for the webinar, Nexus Between Water Quality and Tribal Cultural Lifeways, with speaker Mike Stover. He will allow us to "explore the connection of water quality to the preservation of tribal sustenance practices, traditional lifeways and cultural connections to the natural environment in Native American communities. Legacy industrial toxins, hydropower without adequate fish passage, and the effects of climate change pose a threat to the survival of tribal cultural and dietary lifeways. Recent advances in federal policy and regulations are helping to thwart the impacts to Tribal culture through promulgation of protective water quality standards, permit conditions and industrial licensing."
